Big Improvement Being Made At Kennel Club

Effective Monday, December 4, the El Cerrito Kennel club will sell all option tickets in the enclosed mezzanine floor, now under construction. The new mezzanine will extend from the clubhouse throughout the length of the grandstand and will be entirely enclosed, making El Cerrito the only plant in the country with a specially heated and enclosed ticket department. A heating plant is being installed.

Tonight's Mischief Man of the recently arrived Delta Kennels, trained by Vern Shifflet, makes his debut at El Cerrito in a dog match race against such favorites as Cleo Carass, Jack Lambert, Flying Point, Cheerio Joe, Shasta King and Iva Malone. Mischief Man, Mad Miser, Dangerous Dan and Master Mial are starting their campaign at El Cerrito this week, and those who attend them at Baden know their prowess.

A five-team Contra Costa County Basketball League was formed at Martinez last evening following a meeting of the managers of the various hoopsters involved.

This will be the second year of the County hoop and is expected to become one of the fastest leagues in Northern California. It must be remembered that the league collapsed in mid-season a year ago because of a general misunderstanding of league rules. A local team withdrew from league participation along with a Crockett aggregation as a result of this incident.

A year seems to have patched up all indifference and with the entry of two Richmond teams, two from Crockett and the fifth from Martinez, the cage league may be a financial success as all these towns draw well at the rate.

The Richmond Produce will be a traveling outfit.

Games for the first half, as arranged last night, are as follows: December 14—Lasell's vs. Johnson Clothiers at Martinez; Community Center vs. Richmond Produce at Crockett.

December 21—Arrows vs. Johnson Clothiers at Richmond; Eagles vs. Produce at Crockett; Lasell's, bye.

December 28—Lasell's vs. Arrows at Martinez; Eagles vs. Clothiers at Crockett; Produce, bye.

January 5—Eagles vs. Lasell's at Crockett; Produce vs. Clothiers at Richmond; Arrows, bye.

January 12—Produce vs. Lasell's at Martinez; Arrows vs. Eagles at Crockett; Clothiers, bye.

With the opening of the Richmond City Basketball League near the team from the Civilian Conservation Corps, would appreciate meeting a local team in a practice game. All Richmond hoop managers desiring a contest should communicate with L. Bolles, care Company 917 CCC, San Pablo Dam, California.

Fans may believe the Johnson Clothiers and the Richmond Produce may cancel their entrance into the local cage league by virtue of their entry in the County League but from reliable sources it has been learned that both teams will compete in the Richmond league.

A roster of the various teams in the local city basketball league will be published in the columns of this newspaper in the near future.

Speaking Of Sports

LONDON, Nov. 28.—AT—Cambridge University's track and field hopes are very slim this year, now that the two U. S. athletes, J. B. Hawes and Oscar Sutermeister, both of Harvard, have left.

Hawes completed the dash in the meet with Oxford last March, in which he finished second to his first string, E. L. Davies, one yard behind. He was also a number of the Oxford and Cambridge team which toured the United States this year. Similarly, Sutermeister was a member of both teams. Easily the best pole-vaulter at either university, he cleared 12 feet, 7 inches in March for a new university record, and beat the English record for five-eighths of an inch.

Both Hawes and Sutermeister remained in America when the Oxford and Cambridge team sailed for home.

This leaves Davies, who now is president, with a sore problem of filling the gaps. He has seven old blues (better men) to draw on, but only Davies himself, is an event winner. D. L. Rathbone, if he can produce the form which enabled the American tour, picks himself for the 440 yards, but he is the only one that does. The others are mediocre, and the recent trial meet, with one exception, failed to produce any "finds."

Unless there is considerable improvement soon, observers predict that Oxford will win both the relay meet at the end of November, and the inter-varsity meet next March, by an overwhelming number of events.

STANFORD NOT TO PLAY GAELELEVEN IN 34

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28.—UP—It appeared tonight that Stanford would not play St. Mary's college next season, as tentatively discussed when schedules were mulled over last season.

The strong St. Mary's team also faced the possibility of playing neither University of Southern California nor Santa Clara.

President Ray Lyman Wilbur of Stanford, who has the final word in saying whether Stanford will play St. Mary's for the first time since 1927, refused comment on reports that Stanford students and alumni opposed the game.

Coach Edward P. "Slip" Madigan of St. Mary's said: "How can it be said that Stanford has cancelled a game with us when we have not been on the schedule?"

CROSSED WIRES
Franklin Roosevelt is a past master at handling the press, but no presidential statement even in the days of the press-shy Mr. Hoover ever went more haywire than that issued from Warm Springs recently regarding Cuba. It was intended as unequivocal support for Ambassador Sumner Welles. Instead it was interpreted rushed through the Roosevelt statement on Cuba. It said that the Grau Government being a high-handed dictatorship could not be recognized. But if Cuba formed a coalition government it would be recognized.

The statement was drafted by mid-afternoon. But then it got lost on somebody's desk in the State Department. It was not until 10:30 p. m. that acting Secretary Phillips realized the statement had not been wired to Roosevelt. He sent it off.

The President made it public at midnight. Usually he is very careful with his press releases. He knows newspapermen jump at conclusions. When Russian recognition was accomplished, he locked his doors and read the entire agreement aloud to the press.

But with the Cuban statement the hour was late. Newspapermen rushed to their telephones, picked up the last sentence and featured it.

The last sentence said that Ambassador Welles soon would be replaced by Jefferson Caffery. This had been made public three months before. But in the midnight rush it became the news of the hour.

So the general public believes Ambassador Welles was recalled.

WAITING
"See you are going down to Warm Springs," a newspaperman remarked to Secretary Ickes.

"Ah, I know is what I read in the papers," Ickes replied, smiling. "I woke up and read in the morning paper I was going there for a little vacation with the President. Struck me that wasn't a bad idea, so I packed my bags and got ready."

"When are you going?"
"Oh, just as soon as I'm ready."

"Oh, yeah!" interjected Colonel Henry M. Waite, his friend and assistant. "You mean as soon as you get an invitation."

TUOHY GANG ACQUITTED BY U. S. JURY

ST. PAUL, Nov. 28.—UP—Four members of the Roger Tuohy gang of Chicago were acquitted by a federal court jury today of the kidnapping and interstate transport of William Hamm, Jr., wealthy brewer.

The verdict was returned at 2:30 P. M., almost 18 hours after it was given to the jury.

Tuohy and his co-defendants, Gustave Schaeffer, Edward McFadden and William Sharkey, were retried immediately on fugitive warrants for the abduction last July of John (Jake) the Barber) Factor, Chicago promoter and stock plunderer.

The acquittal was the federal government's first setback in its war on kidnapping. Convictions previously had come with machine-like regularity since passage of the so-called Lindbergh law and inauguration of the policy of federal aid for local enforcement officers.

Jubilation of the four gangsters over their acquittal was tempered by the knowledge that they must stand trial in Illinois, where kidnapping is a capital offense.

They were returned to the county jail to await completion of extradition proceedings.

The gangster was tried on two indictments, one charging that they took Hamm to Wisconsin after abducting him from near his home June 15, the other charging conspiracy to violate a federal statute. They were acquitted on both counts.

William Scott Stewart of Chicago, head of the defense counsel, said that the verdict was "just and fair."

"It was the only verdict the jury properly could bring," he said.

Stewart and Thomas W. McMeekin, his associate counsel, built their case around alibis for Schaeffer and Tuohy. No evidence was introduced on behalf of McFadden and Sharkey.

Factor, whose testimony the government hopes will sent the four men to Illinois electric chair, was in the courtroom when the verdict was read.

The government's case was built largely around testimony given by Hamm himself and identification of the four by a Chicago printer, who said he saw Hamm hustled into an automobile near his home.

Hamm tentatively identified the men early in the trial, but later revoked his testimony, saying that he was in doubt. He told of being driven a long distance, blindfolded, and confined four days before payment of $200,000 ransom.

Egan Appeal Is Denied By High Court

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28.—UP—The appeal from a life sentence filed by Frank J. Egan, former public defender of San Francisco and convicted slayer, was denied today by the First Circuit Court of Appeals.

Egan and Albert J. Tinnin were sentenced September 14, 1932. Notice of appeal was made the same day, but when the appeal was later filed Attorney General U. S. Webb moved for dismissal on grounds the time limit for filing had expired.

The court today upheld Webb's objection.

Egan and Tinnin were convicted of killing Mrs. Jesse Scott Hughes of San Francisco.

THANKSGIVING

Richmond has a host of reasons for a sincere Thanksgiving. While we eat our turkey and our mince pie let us count our blessings.

To begin with, the community has recognized the value of organized community effort in times like these. The Chamber of Commerce of Richmond has continued to receive whole-hearted support from the same groups and individuals that have stood behind it all these years. That is a recognition of the fact that in a difficult period we need organized community effort even more than in easier times.

Our channels are being widened and improved with government aid to make the port of Richmond easily accessible to the largest ocean-going steamers. More than ever this city will be on the shipping map of the world.

There has been a rearrangement of affairs at the Parr-Richmond Terminal on the inner harbor whereby one half of this facility has been leased to Dried Fruit Shippers, Inc., and tonnage worth $60,000 a year is passing over the terminal. Through the leadership of Fred D. Parr there is every reason to believe Richmond can hold this business.

Industries have operated on high schedules during the past summer when there was an increased demand for goods and are still running at a level which will compare favorably with activities in any industrial city. Richmond has a wide variety of goods to sell to the outside world and all classes of our people profit from every upturn in the world's market. Revival of trade with Russia is important to this city, both from the standpoint of manufacturing and shipping.

The Chamber of Commerce believes Richmond has much for which to be thankful. Let us all pull together, to the end that next Thanksgiving and all the Thanksgivings to come shall see Richmond moving higher and still higher in the scale of civic life.

Your Good HEALTH

By CLAUD N. CHRISMAN, M.D.

Asking the Doctor for Free Advice Certainly Seems Unfair

I RECEIVE many requests for a definite treatment for certain diseased conditions of which I write in these articles. I also get inquiries as to why I do not give more definite advice about treatment and prescriptions in my articles. I sometimes think that I give too much advice about treatment, and fear that some one will use my advice and not see a physician, as soon as he should.

My endeavor is to make as plain as possible the physical evidence of disease, how it may act, what the results may be if neglected, and some idea of the method, which is used in treating the condition. Thus you may know that something can be done and should see a physician who will give you specific advice about treating your case without knowing a great deal about you, yourself.

THERE are only a very few diseases for which we have a specific remedy. If you have malaria I can advise you to use quinine, but I cannot advise as to how much, because you may be very susceptible to quinine and what would be enough for some person would be entirely too much for you. If your child has diphtheria, and you are able to determine that from the description in my article, I can advise diphtheria anti-toxin, but not how much to use, and it would take a long article to warn you against the things you should know about your child before he is given the anti-toxin. Your physician must know that.

A PHYSICIAN does not treat the diseased condition alone. He treats an individual with that disease. Frequently people stop me on the street and say, "Doctor, I have a bad cold. What is good for it?" I feel very foolish, but in sheer honesty I have to say that I don't know. I can tell me with disgust and I can see them thinking "He does not want to give advice for nothing." That is not the point.

COLDS manifest themselves in many ways; we have a cold in the head, or it settles in the chest, the abdomen, the back, and wherever it is no physician can treat it intelligently till he has examined that patient. He determines what effect the cold is having on the heart, lungs, liver, intestines, and an individual with a cold, not everything else. He must treat the cold alone. That is the reason a physician advises against self medication.

ONE of our very best and most popular physicians said to me one day, "I have stopped going to parties among small groups." I asked him why. He said, "Some one is sure to ask my advice about the treatment of some condition they have and I don't like to say, I don't know. I have answered questions that way, and had the person return to speak to me the next time we met. I have made more enemies by my refusal to prescribe for them offhand than in any other way. I often feel like starting out and asking them, before the entire group, all the intimate questions I must have an answer to before I can prescribe, and go through all the routine of a house call in my office or their home and see how they like it."

NO! A physician cannot prescribe treatment for a patient he does not know. I can describe as plainly as possible the symptoms and actions of a disease. I can give general directions for treatment and methods of reasonable knowledge of yourself and to teach you to go to your physician when you are below par. The more you know of diseases, the more careful you will become.

Dutch Apple Cake

For Dutch apple cake, use one third of the dough recipe. Let rise until double in bulk, cut down and roll one-half inch thick. Place in a greased round or square pan and brush with butter. Cover and let rise until almost double in bulk, then peel four cooking apples and cut into one-third inch sections. Arrange these sections in rows, pressing their edges slightly into the dough. Sprinkle generously with brown sugar and cinnamon or nutmeg and dot with bits of butter. Let rise fifteen minutes longer. Bake in a moderate oven. Cover the top with a piece of buttered paper to begin with so the apples will have a chance to cook. Turn uncover them and let the cake brown.

IT'S A WOMAN'S RIGHT TO LOOK HER VERY BEST

By JACQUELINE HUNT

BEAUTY and charm have always been women's secret goal. But now women no longer try to keep secret the fact that they resort to every trick possible to improve upon their nature. This sincerity has probably done more than anything else to extend the use of cosmetics and it has made for more skillful use of our beauty aids.

A woman is no longer ashamed to admit that she uses mascara on her lashes. She will tell you frankly that without it her eyes are too small, but that an extra bit of darkening on her lashes and a bit of eye shadow gives her eyes the important place in her facial ensemble that they should occupy. She no longer hides her rouge pot as far back as possible under her lingerie—it occupies a prominent place on the top of her dressing table.

Women admit that they "touch up" their hair occasionally and even share their tricks with their friends. The matter of dyeing or bleaching the hair was the last to be accepted where beauty was concerned. Why? If it rinses or dyes or a discreet use of a bleach gives your hair life and highlights and makes you more attractive then why shouldn't you use them? Hair with highlights is a beauty asset. This and other make-up tricks will often convert an ordinary person into one of startling charm and loveliness.

In giving nature a hand, begin with your eyes. Blend your rouge well upward to your eyes so it will keep the interest in your face centered where you want it. Rouge blended lightly into the area just under the lower lashes will prevent that staring look that you have when the space is left white and bare. It will also give your eyes brilliance and depth.

A complexion that is flawless is another beauty asset that no woman will deny striving for and right now with cold, dry breezes meeting us at every corner, it is a real job. There are dozens of magic new creams and lotions and tonics compounded to help you, but one of the most effective aids is also the oldest and simplest—the milk white lotion that your mother allowed you to use when you were a little girl and your hands were red and chapped from making mud pies or playing in the wind.

It's just as much in use now, and it is grand for cleansing and soothing your burning, rough-skinned skin when you come home from a shopping tour in the cold wind or from a football game. Slicker on a few seconds of the lotion, pat lightly a few seconds and remove with tissues, then apply more lotion (it's honey and almond) and massage it well into the skin. Your skin will feel soft and velvety and comfortable. In cases of severe chapping use several applications and be sure to give your hands their share of the preparation.

Dryness is the most common skin fault during the cold weather and many of you have found that your usual morning routine is not as satisfactory as it used to be during the summer. For you I would suggest this morning routine, which is toning yet gentle. Splash your face with cool water until you feel awake, then take a pad of cotton and moisten it with skin tonic. Dip this in your cleansing cream and wipe it over your skin with light upward strokes. Wash your face with the tonic and cream mixture. Then wipe with skin tissues and pour a little of the tonic into the palm of your hand and slip it onto your face and neck with brisk upward and outward pats.

While your skin is still moist apply a cream rouge and blend it well into your cheeks. Just enough of the oil from the cleansing cream will remain on your skin to furnish a light base for your make-up and you will find it less drying to your skin than a foundation cream. Dust on your powder, apply lipstick and there you are, comfortably made up for the morning. If you are going out immediately, then apply an additional film of all-purpose cream or an oily foundation cream.

Mix and sift flour and alum, add water slowly until, by stirring, a perfectly smooth mixture results. Then cook over a steady fire until a nice paste is made. As it cools, add clove oil and salicylic acid, dissolved in alcohol. Bottle and keep in cool dry place. This is a fine library paste.

Tasty Dishes for Today

WHEN IN DOUBT TRY SOME FISH

By JUDITH WILSON

CHILLY weather means busy days for the fishermen. It brings new fish to the markets, and the abundance of the common varieties like haddock, halibut, cod and bluefish, means that prices are lower than ever right now. Pompano, mullet and Southern mackerel are among the latest fish to make their debut.

Crayfish

In addition, a few markets are selling the deliciously-flavored little crayfish from the South. The tails of these warty-looking little creatures can be used in any recipe calling for shrimp and are especially good when boiled, then drained and reheated in a highly seasoned Creole sauce and served on a bed of boiled rice. Here is the recipe for the sauce:

Creole Sauce

Cook together for ten minutes a cup and a half of canned tomatoes, one sliced pepper sliced thin, one medium onion, sliced, one clove of garlic and half a cup of sliced mushrooms. Cook for ten minutes one-half cup of brown gravy, cook for two minutes longer and thicken with one tablespoon flour blended with one tablespoon of butter. Cook and stir until smooth, add the crayfish tails (or shrimp) and simmer for five minutes. Season to taste with salt and cayenne pepper.

Filet of Flounder

Filet of flounder takes on new appeal when prepared in this way: Wash the filets quickly under cold water and dry with a clean towel. Lay them in a dish with one grated onion, the juice of half a lemon, a tablespoon of chopped parsley and a pinch of thyme. Cover the dish and let the fish stand in the seasonings for half an hour. Remove the filets, dust with flour, dip in beaten egg, then in dry bread crumbs and fry in a shallow pan in which four tablespoons of butter have been melted. Dip some of the melted butter over them and set under the broiler flame, turning the oysters until brown and crusty on all sides. Serve them hot from the pan with plenty of lemon and big, green salads.

Broiled Oysters

Broiled oysters will delight an epicure. Try them for supper some night when your husband brings a bachelor friend out to dinner. Drain the oysters (better allow at least a half dozen for each person) and dry them lightly with a clean towel. Dip them into beaten egg, then roll in fine, dry bread crumbs and arrange in a shallow pan in which four tablespoons of butter have been melted. Dip some of the melted butter over them and set under the broiler flame, turning the oysters until brown and crusty on all sides. Serve them hot from the pan with plenty of lemon and big, green salads.

Boiled or broiled left-over fish can be used in croquettes for breakfast or luncheon. Have about a pound of cooked fish, broken into small flakes. Season with the juice of half a lemon, a tablespoon of finely chopped parsley, a teaspoon of

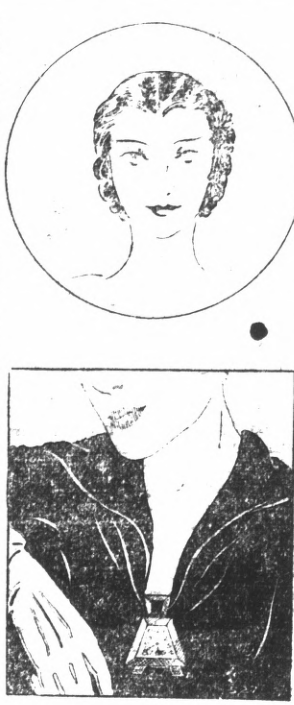

New York—Every other woman you meet is in a great rush for a fitting at her tailors' or the tailors' or the dressmakers. Perhaps, but usually to her costume. You just can't let yourself go. Restraint is what we're after, a term which is really more than that. We don't just pull in our waistline, but strive for figure control, and if we do not let it—well, we might just as well wear last year's fads.

Prize be, sleeves have learned control too. If you want them big, it's your privilege, but there is nothing obligatory about it. Most women are all for the smooth shoulder line; there may be seams or other details to make the most of the shoulder's natural width. Most of the padded shoulders are on the padding, not on the shoulders, just now.

In their efforts to give a woman her money's worth by making it possible for a dress to do double or triple service, designers have naturally made good use of these elaborate fastenings, whether they be clips, buttons or slides. Instead of attempting to hide the fact that a dress is convertible, designers glory in emphasizing this feature.

Mrs. Average Woman is torn between her desire to express recovery in her costume before she really feels it in her purse. The clothes, now that one has gotten over the first shock, are so lovely—or don't you agree? They have streamlined out, anyway, so from now on all we have to worry about is how to acquire them and how to achieve that modish look which is so essential to success.

The bewildering variety of necklines need not confuse the issue. Some of them seem to contradict the others. There's the cape, full at the back, an extension of the cape with the neck's hood, and there are the long, silky looking hags.

The cold clip watch, which is sketched above, is designed for the neckline of a tailored jacket or dress, and done in a particularly effective shape with a carnation accent at the top. In this sketch it is purposely done larger proportionately than it actually is, to show the detail better.

Home-Making

By ALINE STERN

As an accompaniment to a fish course, try molded sweet pickle fish. This is how it is made: Dissolve one package of lemon gelatin in a pint of boiling water. Add small sweet pickles, sliced up. Turn into individual molds and chill until firm. The quantities named in this recipe make six molds. Serve on a leaf of crisp lettuce.

When celery is stuffed with cheese or a cheese base mixture, garnish with a sprinkling of paprika. If you are shopping around for and on for your fireplace, make sure that they are the right size for it. To fit a fireplace properly, andirons should be half the height of a fireplace.

American Legionnaire Explains Mystery of General's Disappearance

A TALE which makes the story, "Beau Geste" seem credible by comparison was recently clarified by Lieutenant Edgar Hamilton, only American officer in the French Foreign Legion. It concerns the disappearance of General Fernandez, Sylvester, the "lost" leader of the 1921 war on the Rif, who is believed by Spain to have been held captive with his officers by dissident Moors. Lieut. Hamilton contends that General Sylvester died in his fight with Abd el Krim's army.

According to the American Legionnaire's story, the French and Spanish detachments sent out to investigate the report that the general was in the hands of Moorish taskmasters in a remote part of Morocco learned on good authority that Spain's army chief had been killed in action.

Abd el Krim, self-styled Emperor of the Moors, at the head of a redoubtable army of Rif warriors, ambushed a Spanish army of 21,000 men at Annual, Spanish Morocco, in 1921. A massacre followed, but reports filtering through to Spain that General Sylvester, the Spanish commander, had been captured. The report also purported to show that some of his officers were also captured and were taken into the hinterland to be held as slaves.

The French authorities in Morocco placed little credence in the legend from Spain. Some time ago, however, the Spanish Government sent an officer to collaborate with French officers, designated by Lucien Saint, French President General of Morocco, to sift the truth of the rumor.

Lieut. Hamilton, a native of Waterbury, Conn., and himself a soldier in the French Foreign Legion for the past twelve years, who was among the officers assigned to investigate, asserts the mission was convinced the General and his officers were killed.

CREDENCE was attached to the report of the General's capture when, after the encounter in the desert with the fierce nomad warriors, General Sylvester's son went to search for his father's body. The bodies could not be found, and so young Sylvester informed the Spanish Government he believed his father and the missing officers had been taken prisoners.

The mystery of General Sylvester's disappearance was used by anti-monarchists in Spain as propaganda against General Berenguer, then Spanish High Commissioner in Morocco, and the now exiled King Alfonso, as well. They claimed the advance into the Rif by the Spanish column should never have been sanctioned. Public opinion in Spain was said to have become so aroused that the affair played an important part in the overthrow of the monarchy.

Two years after Alfonso's flight, Spanish opinion now is assured that the hero of the Rif campaign is not held as hostage, but died in battle with his men.

Lieut. Hamilton, however, does not clear up what did happen to the bodies of the missing leader and his officers. He twice, however, that officials in Morocco had never attached much importance to rumors after official accounts of the battle. Every effort was made, however, to give satisfaction to the disquieted public opinion in Spain.

MODES AND MANNERS

QUESTION: "May a typewriter be used for social correspondence?"—F. D.

ANSWER: It all depends. Letters between friends, containing gossip and other intimate information may be typed. But invitations, answers to invitations, letters of condolence and all correspondence of a formal nature should be written by hand. The contents should be to the point and politely stated. Office stationery is not good form for social purposes, either for a man or a woman. Every business man or woman should have a personal stationery. Correspondence cards are gaining in popularity for men because they make possible brevity.

QUESTION: "I will be married in two weeks by a Justice of the Peace. How should I dress? What should the groom wear? What sort of flowers are appropriate for the bride and groom?"—Louise L.

ANSWER: The bride may wear an afternoon dress or traveling clothes. She does not carry a bouquet but wears a corsage. The bridegroom wears an ordinary business suit and a single small white flower which may come from the bride's corsage. Such a wedding is attended by a minimum of fuss.

OLD-FASHIONED HABITS REVIVED WITH REPEAL

By MARIAN MAYN MORTON

ALTHOUGH some of our best and most enduring traditions have been smashed into smithereens, a few remain to haunt us still. As for example, the bread and butter letter. One may descend on a household out of the blue, as it were, and with one's name thought for the conventions of waiting for an invitation or anything of the sort, but that's no excuse for neglecting to pen an enthusiastic "thank you" epistle. Send a brief, but butter letter even though it has been cake. And the quicker you do it the better, since the chances are that if you delay, the important message will rank with the letter that never came. And perhaps you know what a tragedy that is.

THERE has been all manner of speculation as to how repeal will affect our manners. Whether it will bring back a more formal social program to offset the informality one associates with the flowing bowl. What will be the effect on the holiday season is something worth waiting for. Will the Merry Yule be merrier and will the New Year be any only happier but noisier? Will old New Year's Eve scenes be reenacted, and will the hospitable custom of keeping open house on New Year's Day really be revived?

IT IS TRUE that pendulums swing an equal distance in either direction. Isn't it just possible that following the informal, not to say casual, goings of the moment we may find ourselves leaning over backwards to be elegant, formal, and more startlingly still, polite? Whatever else the olden days were, they were not too took a Great War to demoralize the manners of the world, as well as its morals.

ISN'T IT just possible that we may be a little bit tired of being bad and that we may begin to think that there may be something in the theory that if one is good one is happy? The careless entrance alone into speakeries at which one is known is a funny sort of training for a formal entrance, with escort and everything, into restaurants and other public places. This freedom that we women have enjoyed, and so often abused, is threatened by a return to good manners. When this happens, what do you suppose will result? Nothing, so long as the change is made through the dictum of fashion. The women who stand for discomfort and inconvenience of apparel, such as corsets, high collars and long skirts, will not qual before a few social inconveniences.

THE self-supporting woman who acted as hostess to one or more guests and who took the check unthinkingly is not going to like waiting around for an invitation to go places, at someone else's expense. If it should develop, as so many feel sure it will, that women are to be herded back into the homes and deprived of their pay envelopes, they might as well go into training for the clinging vine and parasite roles.

HAVING NOTHING better to think about, they may decide to turn their attention to etiquette and other almost obsolete subjects. Having plenty of time, they may make the discovery that rudeness really pays, and that there is a charm about what has come to be known as old-fashioned courtesy. So many old-fashioned things are becoming new fashioned. Let us hope it will not only be the furbelows that will have a renaissance but some of the good old traditions of hospitality and courtesy.

Women Shoppers Should Consider Quality

Women spend at least eighty-five percent of the family income. How they dispose of it is worthy of serious thought. They should remember that cheapness in itself is not always a bargain. Suitability and durability are to be considered, as well as price.

How the pay envelope is spent affects every household and the spender should avoid goods made under unfair or sweatshop conditions. She should be reasonable in her demands for service such as alterations, credit and deliveries; and refrain from returning merchandise unless the goods of the store is at fault. It is a bad habit for the shopper to be tempted by goods she does not need, to buy in haste, regret at leisure, and return the goods tomorrow.

HART LYNCH CASE STIRS ALL NATION

SAN JOSE, Nov. 28.—UP—Citizens of San Jose, cognizant of the fact that the lynching here of Jack Holmes and Thomas Thurmond, confessed kidnapers and killers of Brooke Hart, has stirred a nationwide clash of opinion, tonight held to apparent opinion that Sunday night's mob gave the men their just deserts.

The community was backed by Governor James Rolph, Jr., who called the lynching a "good job." His attitude was taken up by Santa Clara officials, who openly admitted prosecution of mob leaders was remote. They pointed out that the leader must be identified and that no one was willing to name the men and youths who were in the foreground when the jail was stormed in face of a tear gas barrage.

D. A. SCORES BOYS

District Attorney Fred L. Thomas described as youthful boasting the claims of Anthony Catalbi, 18, and Ray Spencer, 17, that they led the mob. Other men and youths on the streets here were heard to dispute the claims of Catalbi and Spencer.

The sole court action as a result of the lynchings was seen in a possibility of a damage suit against Governor Rolph, officials of Santa Clara county and San Jose, and against the city and county of San Francisco, by relatives of Holmes.

SUITS PLANNED

Attorney Vincent Hallinan, of San Francisco, who was to have defended Holmes on the kidnapping charge, said he had serious doubts of Holmes' guilt. He advised Holmes, the victim's father, to start suit.

It was said the suits would total $1,000,000.

ROLPH SILENT

At Sacramento, Governor Rolph had no comment except that: "I shall receive good legal advice on the matter."

Governor Rolph, according to Hallinan's announced plans, would be accused of inciting the mob by statements prior to the lynching and of refusing to call out the militia to protect the prisoners when the mob started to form.

CONFESSION IS TOLD

Officials of San Jose, Santa Clara and San Francisco, would be charged with failure to protect the two victims in accordance with their constitutional rights Hallinan said.

Hallinan claimed Holmes told him his alleged confession was forced from him by third degree police methods. Holmes claimed that when he refused to confess after three hours, the police threatened to turn him over to a mob.

MAINTAINS INNOCENCE

Holmes father also maintained his son was innocent.

The father said Holmes gave his word as "father to son" that he was innocent. The father joined Hallinan in saying that Holmes' movements on November 9, the night of the kidnapping and killing of Hart, could be traced to show he could not have participated in the crime.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28.—UP—One arrest was made today as police moved to stop the alleged sales by street peddlers of photographs of the nude body of John Holmes, who was lynched at San Jose Sunday. The man arrested was sentenced to 30 days in jail.

Railroad Men Elect Officers

Railway trainmen of Richmond Lodge 812 held their annual election of officers and as a result of a referendum ballot a slate of 16 officers was filed.

W. W. Scarlett was elected president; Elmer Stroud, vice president; R. J. Craycroft was unanimously elected secretary treasurer, a position he has held continuously for several years. He was also re-elected to succeed himself as legislative representative which he has also held several years.

A. J. Cushman was elected alternate. Cushman is also chairman of the local committee. D. D. Carter will serve as chaplain; F. C. Kaufman is outer guard; G. H. Nicholson inner guard; L. J. Parr, warden; J. H. Craycroft, conductor; and Clarence Craig, past president; A. J. Cushman, G. H. Nicholson and Frank Burch are the organization and membership committee.

The meeting was well attended and was a very interesting and enthusiastic one as many vital subjects pertaining to the welfare of their members and the railway fraternity in general were brought up and disposed of.

A visiting member from Kansas City, Mo. made a short talk on the financial and working conditions in railway service in the east which he thinks is gradually improving in most localities especially in the west. All of the elected officers take their places January 1.

GUARDSMEN BATTLE TO ARREST 4

ALTIMORE, Mo., Nov. 28.—UP—From the riot torn eastern shore of Maryland to the quiet safety of sophisticated Baltimore, a train of national guard trucks filled with armed troopers sped with four lynching suspects tonight.

They fled from the fury of a mob, but paradoxically this mob had sought to save, not slay, the prisoners. The eastern shore mob fought with fire hose and sticks and bricks and stones against tear gas and bayonets of 300 guardsmen in a vain attempt to protect the four citizens accused by Governor Ritchie of participating in the lynching of a negro six weeks ago.

IF TAKEN TO JAIL

The troops and prisoners reached Baltimore just before 6 p. m. and the four alleged lynchmen were taken directly to the city jail.

The day's events savored of rebellion as the citizenry of Wicomico and Somerset counties attempted to prevent national guardmen from carrying out the governor's orders.

The vigorous Ritchie laid down a final challenge with troops from the urban sector of the state to the isolated individualistic eastern shore—a challenge against lynch law. The eastern shore, castigated for many years by Henry L. Mencken, the sharp tongued "sage of Baltimore" as a backwoods community of medieval ignorance, responded with a challenge of its own which sent the governor's troops scurrying away with their prisoners to Baltimore and safety.

GUARDSMEN STONED

The breach between Baltimore and the urban civilization it represents, and the eastern shore, between Chesapeake Bay and the ocean, with its viewpoint of rural isolation, is one of centuries standing; but the cleavage never was wider nor sharper than it was tonight, after militiamen and State Attorney General William Preston Lane, Jr., had been stoned out of the town of Salisbury, and newspapermen and photographers had been forced to flee for their lives from the infuriated mob.

In Baltimore, scarcely a ripple was caused by the frenzied day across the Chesapeake. Plans for handling the four prisoners were left in doubt, but there appeared to be no question that they would be safe in the city jail. When affairs quieted down on the eastern shore, it is assumed, they will be taken back to Princess Anne, Somerset county, for arraignment. Meanwhile, there may be habeas corpus action and other legal maneuvers.

NO RIOT DANGER

At any rate, there is no apparent danger that the rioting of the eastern shore will be transferred to the city.

In Annapolis, however, there was bitter denunciation of the governor by eastern shore legislators, with threats of impeachment. Ritchie himself, confined to his home there with a bad cold, met the attacks with silence.

Five more men have been named by state investigators as participants in the lynching. The troopers were unable to find them when they descended upon Princess Anne this morning with orders to arrest the suspects whom local authorities had refused to prosecute. Whether Ritchie would order the troops back to arrest these five remained a widely debated question. If he does, it seemed certain the eastern shore will fight again.

FOUR ARE HELD

The four men, arrested by the guardsmen were: William H. Thompson, 39, druggist; Irving Adkins, 30, special officer; William P. Hearn, 25, trucker, and William S. McQuay, 26, chain store clerk.

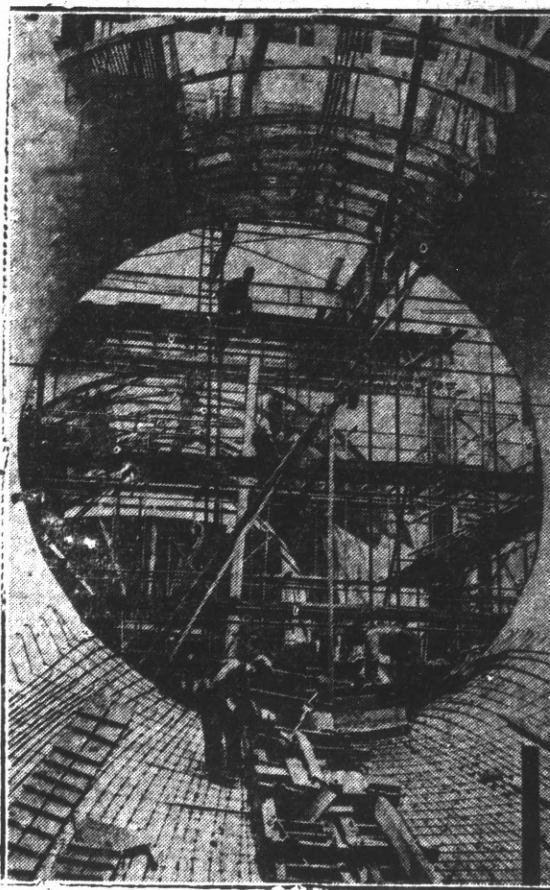

Their arrest, as a warning from the State House that lynch law would not be tolerated in Maryland, was in sharp contrast to the attitude expressed in California by Governor James Rolph Jr., who had defended a mob that lynched two white kidnapers.

LYNCHED NEGRO

The mob at Princess Anne lynched George Armwood, negro, who had confessed assaulting an aged white woman. After his arrest, Ritchie inquired of local authorities if they needed aid to protect him. They said they did not. But when a mob formed it found little difficulty in seizing him from the Somerset county jail and killing him.

Governor Ritchie demanded prosecution of the mob's leaders, but local officials said they could identify none. State investigators then named nine men, including the four arrested today as participants.

Trucks Pull Doors Off Southern Jail In Wild Mob Scene

restrained from firing, however, not wishing to injure scores of women and children whose shrill cries urged the men to storm the jail.

All windows on the north side of the jail were smashed by rocks hurled by the angry, cursing men. For more than an hour the defenders held the mob at bay.

GAS IS USED

Then the besiegers converged from two sides. One section gained the second floor of the courthouse but was repulsed by tear gas clouds.

Finally trucks were driven up to the jail. Log chains were fixed to them and hooked onto the doors. The powerful engines ripped out the doors.

BODY IS BURNED

The mob swarmed in. Sheriff Theisen surrendered the negro rather than engage in a pitched battle.

The mob seized him, and hurried to a tree a block from the jail. A rope was thrown around his neck and he was hoisted up over a limb.

Then the body was cut down, saturated in kerosene and burned.

Ritchie ordered County Attorney Robins to order their arrest. He declined.

SOLDIERS CALLED

The governor then asked the three judges of the judicial district to appoint another prosecutor, as they are empowered to do under Maryland law. The judges did not bother to answer his request, so the governor stepped in today with force, taking the matter out of local hands.

Six busloads of militiamen accompanied the four lynching suspects to the Baltimore jail. The prisoners were hustled hastily inside with the soldiers guarding each one. The four men held hats and overcoats over their faces as photographers let off flashlights.

Attorney General Lane and Brigadier General Rockford, adjutant of the national guard, did not arrive with the troops and it was understood they went to Annapolis to report to the governor.

The soldiers, after seeing the prisoners jockeyed up, proceeded to their armory.

SALISBURY, Md., Nov. 28.—UP—A burned automobile cushion in a main street and scattered missiles lying harmlessly on the pavement were almost the only evidence left in Salisbury tonight of a day of furious rioting. But beneath the quiet that had descended on the town was a grim determination to continue resistance against Governor Ritchie's attempts to punish the lynchers of George Armwood, negro.

Even the violent anger toward newspapermen which led a mob this afternoon to burn a newsman's automobile, throw a sound camera truck into the Wicomico river and chase reporters out of town had calmed.

But the eastern shore dwellers still showed suspicion of outsiders and a friendly resident advised me urgently to go elsewhere to seek quarters for the night.

C. C. FARMERS DEMAND LOANS ON RANCHERS

BERKELEY, Cal., Nov. 28.—UP—Fifty men and women who said they represented the Farmers' Protective League of Sonoma and Contra Costa counties marched through Berkeley in orderly fashion today to seek aid from the Berkeley branch of the federal land bank in preventing mortgage foreclosures.

Some of the marchers carried banners which read: "We want aid from the federal land bank." They went to the bank and presented demands.

The marchers said they represented farmers who were about to have mortgages foreclosed on their ranches, who had applied to the federal land bank for loans, and whose applications either had been denied or granted in such a reduced form that they were unable to save their ranches.

Howard and Wilson were received by Willard D. Ellis, president of the land bank. After the conference Ellis received each one of the 25 farmers who maintained they had not received fair treatment from the land bank.

The farmers were received singly and their cases heard. There was no disorder. Two Berkeley plainclothesmen mingled with the delegation but had no work to do.

Ellis said the bank had acted at once in cases where emergency loans had been required to forestall imminent foreclosures of ranch property. An appraiser is sent and the mortgage holder is contacted with the request he postpone foreclosure, in such an instance, Ellis explained.

Petitions of the kind have been received almost daily for the past month and in most instances emergency loans have been made to prevent foreclosures, Ellis averred.

The Farmers' Protective league was organized last spring when a Sebastopol bank threatened to foreclose on the Forrestville ranch of the Rev. J. L. Case.

Men leveling a football field in Alexandria, Egypt, recently found a well preserved tomb of the Roman period in Egypt 2,000 years ago.
